☞ By springing suddenly upon the country the Nebraska bill with the repeal of the Missouri compromise—the throwing away completely all the safe guards and securities of compromises, Senator Douglas has just one string to his violin, Page in time, and that string is slavery. With this he intends openly to play his political tune. It is a bold movement and is bringing into the front rank and before the eyes of the whole people, what has heretofore been kept concealed, although made efficient and too often potential.

The effect which this bold stroke is producing upon the mind of the country begins to show itself in great public meetings and in many indignant protests.

If this bill of slavery abominations and slavery extension shall pass as we fear it will, then the agitation of slavery is but just commenced, and slavery must meet the consequences of the opening of this subject, and must prepare itself to abide by the action which intensified discussion must cause.

☞ The New York Courrier des Etats Unis states that not only is an active enlistment of sailors instead of soldiers for the Russian service quietly going on in New York and various other ports of the Union but that the object for which they are to be used is not the formation of regiments, but the manning and equipment of private vessels of war.

Conferences, of a more or less explicit nature, have been brought about with particular parties, varying in their character according to the person thus approached, lists have been drawn up, tables of forces and equipments prepared, and the very ship selected which would most likely suit. So thoroughly has this work been done that, upon the receipt of intelligence that the first cannon shot has been fired on the Black Sea, nothing would remain to be done but the filling up of letters of marque in order to sweep the Atlantic with a fleet of American privateers carrying the Russian flag at the mast-head.

Beautiful Passage.—In the speech in the Senate the other day on Nebraska, Senator Houston said that he came to public life upon the Missouri compromise. When he came to Congress, thirty years ago, it was then considered a compact never to be broken. Since then great changes have taken place. Of the three hundred members of Congress then in existence, only three remained—Messrs Lyon and Everett, and himself. The others had disappeared. The Presidents had come and gone—the Heads of Departments had all been changed. It was a solemn reflection.

"When I remember all the friends so linked together,
I've seen around me fall like leaves in winter weather,

☞ The Pescara gives an account of the celebration, by the citizens of Kenduskeag, of the second anniversary of the incorporation of that town, at the Town Hall, on Monday evening. The town is in a prosperous condition, and by taking an interest in the social welfare of each other, the intelligent and patriotic citizens intend to make it the happiest community in the State. The music, the best fruits, have the best farms, the most skilful mechanics, the most enterprising merchants, the bravest men and the most attractive women of any town in the county.

Fire at Passadumkeag—Loss of Life!

On Monday night last, the dwelling house of James B Cleaveland, Esq at Passadumkeag, took fire and was with great difficulty extinguished. But it is painful to relate, Mrs. Hannah Glidden a very aged lady, who was confined to her chamber by sickness, perished, although by the noble efforts of the citizens she was rescued from the flames, for so shockingly burnt that she sickened but a very short time.

☞ The public sentiment is becoming more and more decided in its hostility to the scheme now pending for regulating the governments of Kansas and Nebraska. It is felt to be a wanton, profligate and at once unconscionable violation of a sacred compact and is deprecated as not only unjust in itself but as certain to plunge the country into the fiercest agitation of the slavery question.

☞ The action of the steamer Admiral vs. Merchants Steam Navigation Co., brought for damages caused by collision in Boston harbor with the Eastern State, which has been pending for a long time in the United States Court, has been decided against the steamer Admiral.

☞ The press of the country is just now agonizing as if in fear of every man wearing his entire beard, unshaved and unshorn. We dined in four-times and then gave it up with the determination to meet the world barefaced.

Cuba is daily becoming more entangled in the meshes of the sin of England. It is pretty generally known, that very soon there will be a reduction of a cent in the postage, of the duties now paid, or rather perhaps should say, which ought to be paid, amounting to four upon British manufactures imported into this island. This is an advantage or preference should be shown or given to the manufactures of Great Britain over those of the U. States, is any other country, can only be attributed to the growing and increasing influence which England, with her ever scheming diplomacy, has at present with respect to the affairs of Cuba.

Great Tornado—Over Fifty Buildings Destroyed.

Harrison, Ohio, Feb 14.

To-day, about 4 o'clock, P. M., this town of Harrison, twenty miles north west of Cincinnati, was visited by a fearful and destructive tornado, tearing down dwellings, stables, &c. The course of the torrent of air was nearly from southwest to northeast, and the width of its track was about one hundred yards. A thunder shower came on from about N. W., with indications of a heavy rain, which was realized. Probably ten or fifteen minutes after the commencement of the rain, the tornado came down the White Water Hills, northwest of the town, and about west of Goodlay's mill, leaving in its track a prostrated and broken forest. It crossed the canal just north of Goodley's mill, and struck the town in the direction of the Presbyterian Church, and crossing the lake near the east end of the town. It left in its track such desolation and devastation as we have never before seen. Houses stables, fences, trees and out buildings were prostrated, and in many cases blown into the adjoining lots. We were on the ground in a few minutes after the destruction, and gathered up in a hasty manner the items of destruction and loss. There are of course many omissions in the individual losses. A young man by the name of Wm Braden, had his leg broken, and Thomas Homan was dangerously wounded, and several others more or less injured; but no lives lost. In a manner, too, for several houses and shops were entirely blown down.

In one shop five men were at work, and the building was entirely demolished; yet they escaped, by crawling from under the building.

A Capital Hit.

In his Nebraska speech in the Senate a day or two since, Mr. Houston cracked a fine joke at the expense of the presidential aspirants. He said that the Senator from Connecticut had intimated that the Presidency had something to do with his movements. He knew not how the fact was, but he stood in opposition to the majority. Several distinguished Senators had been named for that office, among them a Senator from South Carolina, Mr. Hunter; from Virginia (Mr. Hunter), from Illinois (Mr. Douglass) and himself. He thought he could beat them all on the feelings of each of those Senators, with respect to this matter, by treating the question as it ought to be treated, as an open one. It was customary at one time, in Georgia, for magistrates assembled in quorum courts, if all else was quiet among justices of the peace, during the recess of the Legislature—The master-boundsmen were then called company. On one occasion a vacancy happened in the magistracy in the west of Capt. Waters. An upright, honest, robust, athletic freshman, named Yeats, was a candidate for the vacancy, and to bring a great canon accustomed to giving his friends a lasting one on the head on all occasions where they opposed him, he was advised to attend the court. He did so, and secured the favor of two of the five justices. Toward the close of the day, on Saturday night drew on, one of his friends said, "Oh there is a vacancy in Captain Waters' beat, who is all we oppose." His other friend immediately answered—"Sure, and never mind Mr Yeats, who lives there—he can command some one." Yeats was therefore called up and asked if he knew any man in the beat whom he could recommend to fill the vacancy in the Justices of the Peace. Yeats responded—"May it please your honors, I've lived in the same house these fifteen years, and know every man, woman and child who ever lived there, but I know to speak over honors just as if I was there at all, and don't know anything in reference to it, and don't call any man in the whole beat than myself for the place." (Loud laughter.)

Mr. Justice—Do you apply this to yourself? (Laughter.)

Mr. Yeaton—No, I say that at the following will doubtless be entertained by all those gentlemen who are named for the Presidency. (Laughter.)

A few days since a lawyer of this city was seated in his office busily employed in studying out a plea, when the door opened, and a young, stout son of Erin entered, doffed his hat, and said the he desired to take an advice or (his honor." The lawyer bade him sit down, and inquired his business. "Shure" he replied "I want a divorce from me wife Judy." The lawyer asked what was the trouble, but Pat seemed very loth to tell. "Does she not treat you well, does she ill take care of your house, has she deserted you, or does she like some one better than yourself" were inquiries made by the lawyer, who endeavored for some time in vain to pump out the reason of a desire for a divorce. At last, weary of the investigation, the disciple of Coke informed his pupil he did not think he could do nothing for him unless knowing all the facts of the case. "Well, if I must I must," replied the husband "whisky loves a little darlin I love it more than Biddy" The lawyer could hardly get any laughter indecently to inform the Hibernian that the law could not touch such a case in his and Pat left with a countenance more of sorrow than of anger.—Boston Traveller.

Letters and papers received from Durango announce the defeat of a party of Indians, and the recovery of nearly a thousand head of stock from them, at a place called Lanes de las Palmas, on the 10th ult. Capt Alvarez who accomplished this feat, is said to have had a body of seventy or eighty men with him, and the number of Indians who took part in the contest somewhat exceeded forty. Five of the latter were killed and several wounded. The rest ran four of the killed were sent the next day to Gov Heredia.

Mr. Edwards Everett on Friday was a mass of eye of argument and eloquence. He completely demolishes the wretched pretence, that by Compromise of 1850 car, or was intended to, subvert that of 1820. The miserable subterfuge of ratifying this breach of faith under the pretence of permitting territories to decide for themselves, that is, to suffer a mere handful of landholders to fasten slavery upon future millions, was shown up in a strong light.

Great Britain.

The following is a summary of the debate in the House of Lords on the war question:

In the House of Lords, on Monday, 6th, the Marquis of Clanricarde brought forward his motion, "to call the attention of the House to the state of the country with relation to the question of peace or war. The Marquis said that when he brought forward his notice of motion he certainly thought from the language held by the members of the government in that House, that the proposal made to the Emperor of Russia has been virtually, if not formally, rejected by him, and that this formal refusal to accede would be received immediately. It appeared, however, that no formal refusal had been received, and that the semblance of negotiations resulting in peace he was unwilling to provoke discussion, and would rest content with asking the foreign Secretary the simple yet important questions,—Has any answer been received from the Emperor of Russia?—What is the present state of diplomatic relations with that power, and what instructions, if any, have been sent to the British Minister at St. Petersburg?

The Earl of Clarendon replied that Lord Clanricarde was so far correct in his supposition that a proposal from the Emperor of Russia had been received at Vienna and was known there on Friday, 3d instant, stating the terms on which he would be prepared to negotiate for peace. He (Lord Clarendon) had only last afternoon (the 6th, received official instruction of the fact. It was only on the 2d inst. that the Conference was called together, and these proposals, or rather this counter project of the Emperor of Russia was communicated by Count Buol, the Austrian representative, to the representatives of France, England and Prussia. The despatch announcing this fact was not in the hands of all the members of Government, but he (Clarendon) could inform the House that the terms of the Emperor's proposal were quite unacceptable, and not of a character to permit the negotiation to be entered into. Upon that point no doubt existed for a moment in the minds of the members of the conference. In reply to Lord Clanricarde's second inquiry Lord Clarendon replied that on Saturday evening, 4th, Baron Brunow, Russian Minister at London called at the Foreign Office, and made known that the answers given to the inquiries of his Government did not permit him to continue his official functions, and consequently diplomatic relations between Russia and Britain are broken off. In the course of the week the papers on which Baron Brunow's withdrawal was founded would be submitted to the House.

The Earl of Ellenborough had been always of opinion that this question which Russia could be solved in no way but by war, and he hoped that ministers would not be deluded by any reasonable into relaxing their preparations for this contingency. He considered that Britain is at the commencement of one of the most formidable wars in which she has ever engaged. He deplored the country at the gulf of that war, but he could not neglect ministers if they failed to prepare for a great and arduous struggle. In particular were they prepared to present a fleet of sufficient force in the Baltic immediately on the breaking up of the ice?

The Marquis of Clanricarde agreed with Lord Ellenborough in believing that the war would be a momentous one, but he could not quite say the ministers were wholly irresponsible for the threatening war. Although they had acted with publicity, he believed that frequently they had not used the right thing at the right time, and it was evident both that the discussion of the matter must have a retrospective character, and that the present position of affairs could not continue long, he would renew his motion that day week.

Earl Fitzwilliam entirely agreed that the present state of affairs could not continue long. Whether the country was fully aware of the tremendous character of the conflict in which it is about to engage, he would not stop to discuss, but he would say that there never was a war in which the people would more heartily support the Government.

Lord Beaumont complained that the information given was meagre. He would therefore ask whether the instructions have been sent for the withdrawal of the British Ambassador from St. Petersburg, and for stopping further negotiations there?

The Earl of Clarendon replied that he was sorry Lord Beaumont thought his information meagre, or that he had built out hopes and expectations that fresh negotiations may be entered into, and that peace may be preserved. He (Clarendon) build out no such hopes. He had said that negotiations have been brought to a close at Vienna, that Russia's new proposals being unacceptable could not be transmitted to Constantinople—and so there was an end of them, and he had no reason to believe that fresh negotiations on the subject would be renewed. He was unable to say why Count Orloff prolonged his stay in Vienna after having executed his mission relating to the treaties between Austria and Russia. With respect to the question whether the British Minister withdrawn from St. Petersburgh, he would say that since Baron Brunow's retirement there had not been time to do more than communicate with the French Government, but to-morrow his instructions would be sent by France and England to Gen. Castelbajac and Sir Geo Seymour, their Ministers at St. Petersburg, which will place them on exactly the same footing as the Russian ministers at Paris and London have adopted, and diplomatic intercourse between the two countries and Russia will be suspended.

This statement by the Government created much excitement in the House.

The London Morning Post of the 4th inst., points out the probable course affairs will take in regard to the war.

"We understand that, as soon as the official notification (now on its way) of the breaking up of the Vienna conference reaches London and Paris, the Western powers will at once address a summons to Russia to evacuate the Danubian principalities, and, in the event of her refusal, they will declare war. Did they wait for Russia to do so, they might wait an indefinite time, and as all the world knows who is the real de facto aggressor, they have no fear of being considered so, when they resort to a necessary and really defensive act, on behalf of the equilibrium of Europe, already miserably shaken by the Czar.

On the declaration of war, which appears now so near, we may expect to see large forces naval and military, put in action. Already Sir John Burgoyne and Colonel Arcedeckne are on board the Cacadoo, on their way to Constantinople, to make there preparations for the combined forces which will follow them.

The official notification of the demise of the Conference of Vienna will probably arrive here by Monday next. The summons to Russia to evacuate the principalities instantly, and on refusal to do so, may consume some score more days, and then we may expect the declaration of war to which we have referred, and the process of active hostilities, which, being followed up with continuous vigor, may possibly cut that Gordian knot which the efforts of diplomacy have hitherto failed to untie."

Germany.

The London Post says:

It is of great importance at the present moment to understand with perfect distinctness the position of the German Powers. We believe we may state, without fear of contradiction, that they have signified their readiness to act against Russia in the event of her crossing the Danube; but, unless she takes that step, they reflect their intention of observing strict neutrality, with the understanding that, in the event of future negotiations, they are willing to throw their influence into the diplomatic scale in favor of the bases of the Protocols signed at Vienna on the 5th and 12th of January.

Unless Austria crosses the Danube, the German Powers will therefore observe neutrality, and leave to England and France the work of forcing Russia to relinquish the material guarantees of which she has become so unjustly the holder."

Berlin Tuesday. The check experienced by Count Orloff in his mission is fully confirmed. At the same time, it must not be thought that Prussia and Austria are disposed, to make common cause with the Western Powers. This had joined them for the purpose of avoiding, by every possible means, an European war. The collision took place between Russia and the maritime powers. Prussia and Austria have resolved not to take part in the struggle.

XXXIIId CONGRESS.

Washington, Feb. 20.

SENATE.

Numerous petitions against the Nebraska Bill were presented from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania Massachusetts, Vermont and Illinois.

Mr Johnson introduced a bill to establish three Indian Territories west of Arkansas.

After the transaction of unimportant business, the Senate took up the Nebraska Bill when Mr Pettit proceeded to discuss the subject.

HOUSE.

Mr Latham, from the Committee on Public Lands, reported the Senate Bill for the extension of the pre emption privilege to California making so in brief remarks in its favor. The bill was passed.

The House went into Committee on the Homestead Bill, when Mr Nohle of Indiana spoke on the tonnage duties question, contending that the power given to the States to levy incidental duties on foreign industry and domestic commerce, was unconstitutional, inexpedient and disastrous.

Mr Evans spoke on the Missouri compromise, contending that it had failed to effect its purpose, it was because the North obstinately opposed it, and not resulting from the late Henry Clay's speeches, in support of his assertion. The vote of 36 30 he maintained, never was a compromise, and was not constitutional. It was not a compromise, because there was no concession on it to the South. In conclusion he advocated the settlement of the slavery question as declared in the compromise of 1850, and as proposed in the Nebraska Bill.

The Speaker rang about a committee consisting of Messrs Sanborn of Baldwin Berry of Gardiner, Potter of Farmington, Hitchcock of Otisfield, and Thompson of Augusta was appointed to receive and count votes for Speaker pro tempore.

After one ballot was counted, and before they were counted, it began to be suspected that the votes were nearly all for Lot M Morrill of Augusta while, in fact, that gentleman was not present to receive the honor.

Mr Hill of Bangor, then moved to suspend further proceedings on the part of the committee. The motion prevailed.

Mr Hill then presented an order, declaring Francis Bould Butler unanimously elected Speaker pro tempore. The order was passed.

Mr Abbott of Norridgewock, laid on the table a bill to increase the salary of the Register of Probate, which was referred to the committee on the Judiciary.

Mr Hayden of New Sharon, introduced an order, requiring of the committee on the Nebraska resolutions when they would be ready to report.

VACANCY FILLED.

Portland, Feb. 22

D. G. Cutler, Whig, is elected Representative to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Hon William Pitt Fessenden, by about 50 plurality.

Allen Haines was his Democratic opponent.

A Maine Love Lyric.

CERTAINLY NOT

WRITTEN BY ALFRED TENNYSON

"Mariana in the Moated Grange."

With thicket growth of beardless face
Was mattered in a ghastly smile;
His hat preserved the faintest trace
Of what was once a sturdy tile.
His elbows glimmered through his coat,
His trousers needed tailor's care,
His boots they were not of a pair,
And through them you was seen right nate
He only said, 'It is the tipple,
The tipple' as he said,
He murmured 'tis the liquor makes a cripple,
And go it till you're dead.'

He raised his hand as they drew more,
He passed it far into the night,
And, in a tone of standing scorn,
'Tis "temperance party" he would slight.
He drank his glass and called for more,
With trembling fingers searching out
For dimes within the tattered store
Which once the nature of pocket bore.
He only said, &c

Oft in the middle of midnight
The wandering Star finds him
Stretched in the kennel beastly tight
And senseless in a trance profound.
He was a dweller in the Tombs
And from that prison white escaped
He sought relief from self-contempt
In handy 'adjoining rooms.

He only said &c

And ever as the lamp grew dim,
And brandy lay he and his mate,
He saw pale spectres glare on him,
And mutter heresy each to each.
Oh they were hours to freeze the soul
When those blue phantoms took him flight—
And to convey the moral learnt,
Each flend upheld a glittering bowl.
He only said, &c

There is within some Liverpool walls
A high and hideous wooden thing,
And in its floor a door that falls,
Obedient to a secret spring.
Ay! groan and shriek with cries and tears
Mercy of earth and prayer demand
A price red blood is on your hands!
Your hardest gift to heel for years.

So ends the ballad of the tipple
Be warned and pray and think
The tapis me for Murder's apple,
You such be dead to you or H

THE ONE-PRICE
MEDICAL DISCOVERY
OF THE AGE!

DR KENNEDY of Roxbury has discovered in one of our mountain pastures we think new remedy that cures EVERY KIND OF HUMOR, from the worst Scrofula down to a common Pimple—in fact he has cured in our city more than One Hundred cases within the last year, after the most skilful physicians had never failed except in two cases [illegible] hundred cases and possessing over three hundred certificates of cures within a circuit of twenty miles of Boston

A few bottles are warranted to cure a running sore on the neck

One bottle is warranted to cure the worst kind of pimples on the face

Four or five bottles will be sufficient to clear the system of Boils, Tetter, Salt Rheum and Erysipelas

Three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of Ringworm

One to two bottles are warranted to cure all humors in the eyes

Two bottles are warranted to cure running of the ears and blotches on the face

Three bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of Scald Head

Four bottles are warranted to cure the worst case of Scrofula

Four bottles will cure the very worst case of Scrofula

A benefit is always experienced from the first bottle and a perfect cure is warranted when the above rules are taken

Nothing is more unpleasant to those who have to apply to us all the disorders in humanity, but the day is past and gone we do not come to the public and plead, and assure we should cure every humor in the system, just to show a fair trial. If you have a humor it has to show. There are no false certificates published from this city. Every one of them are from well known and responsible persons. Call and see them. Read the pamphlets. Inquire of the druggists of Boston and vicinity, and learn the truth. Do not be deceived by pretenders. Dr. Kennedy's Medical Discovery is sold by all druggists throughout the country, and by the proprietor, at No. 10 Hanover street, Boston.

Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5.

DR. KENNEDY, Proprietor.
